GARIBALDI AND DUMAS.

The correspondent of an English paper describes a visit to Garibaldi, in his island home of Caprera. The house is not a palace, there are no vestibules nor velvet draperies, no bondoirs nor bijou drawing rooms, but simply four bare walls enclosing six rooms on a single floor. The General was digging in the garden, and the guest was ashamed to be idle; so Garibaldi who had first thrown aside his pickaxe, gave the visitor a task, and they worked away till noon. A simple dinper was served them at that hour, as to other laborers; after dinner, work again till night fall. Then spear fishing, or sitting in the entrance hall of the house, laughlog and talking until 9 o'clock. At nine each retired to his own room, but the long burning light | cinal use, with his certificate on the bottle; warseen through Garibaldi's window told of la- ranted pure, and the best quality. lors different from those of the day. The story of this exquisitely simple life led by the here who had just liberated Italy, everturned a despotism and given away a kingdom, is one of the most charming in history. Not a Circinnatus receiving the deputies of the Roman Senate at his plow: not Lincoln running home to tell the "old woman" of his lack, presented a more classic picture, or one more likely to be afterward remembered .--Garibaldi was the hero-Dumas thinks him- perfectly pure. self the chronicler. Look here upon this pieture and on this. Damas was lodged in a villa near Naples; one of the chateaux of the Crown; nothing less would serve his turn .-- ST. CROIX RUM, SCOTCH & IRISH WHISKY. Dumas the author of the "Revolution of Naples," of which in his eyes Garibaldi was the only collaborateur, the Auguste Maquet-Danias received in his dining-room, which was decorated like an arsenal to signify the military character, of the new Alexander --Revolvers, bunting knives, muskets of every calibre, surrounded him, and according to a foreign writer, here he was most at home .-In this warlike saloon, he accepted the h mage that was offered him by the most romantic people in the most romantic of armies; the emigrants who had known Dumas in France, ecaries. the young outhusiasts who had read his letters to Cariai, or who read his romances and had been themselves engaged at least for a querier of an hour in writing with their swords the romance of Italian unity; Vasily, ply the trade. the vallet brought by Dumas from Caucasus, with his Circussian cap, and fra Panteleo, the chaplain of Garibaldi, in his monk's babit and hood, with more balls in his revolver than beads on his resary-united in paving court to the great romancer. Here Dumas, the citizen by compliment of Palermo of Girgenti, of Caltanisetta, of Catania, recited big marvellous exertions in behalf of Neapolittle independence, and edited his daily journal in abountable Italian. With the exceptions of the hours devoted to repasts and receptions, he continued his important labors with the pen from five o'clock in the morning till eleven at night. Can anybody doubt which is the great man, the real saviour of Italy.

THE BLENHEIM GALLERY ALL FORGERIES .--The burning of the Titian Gallery at the Palace of Bleinheim last month, caused a universal expression of regret both in Europe and America. These precious paintings were sent as a present to the great Dake of Mariborough. by the King of Sardinia: they were hung under the directions of Sir Joshua Reynolds. in an apartment constructed expressly for them and which was called the Titian Gallery, and for more than a hundred years they were among the artistic treasures which travelers in England made it a point to visit. Could any one suspect that these printings, the gift of an Italian Monarch to to the greatest of English Generals-which were enshrined in a palace and criticised by the most renowned of connoisseurs-were. after all, mere common-place productionsnot only not even copies of Titian but, at best, initations of an inferior artist, who was not even a contemporary of the great Venetian? Yet such appears to be the case, and Mr. George Scharf, a distinguished authority in art criticism, has published a lerter, since the destruction of the so-called Titian paintings, in which he proves, in the most satisfactory manner, the worthless character of those much lamented treasures .-We may judge from this how little reliance is to be piaced upon the originality of the "old masters" which find their way to this country. If a picture has any special sic qualities, without any regard to its being by one of the old masters.

"Judd"-the great Judd, of Ill., just appointed minister to Berlin-is thus daguerrectyped in the Washington States:

"At Willard's one hears nothing but Judd. 'Where's Judd?' 'There's Judd!' 'Better see Judd.' 'Judd knows.' 'I'll tell Judd.' Juid says so.' Judd's very busy.' 'Saw Judd just now.' 'Judd won't do it.' Judd'll sac to that,' Judd'll do it if man can. 'Snow this man to Judd.' 'Letters for Judd.' 'Ask Jaild to take a drink.' 'Judd's consectived from the factories and which will be sold No. 49, Union street,) where we will soon be able to see Juid.' 'Halle, Judd.' 'Good day, Good bye, Judd.' 'Don't forget. 'Now's your chance with Judd. 'Judd's great' Judd's immense.' 'Mast ses Judd.' 'Judd's engaged all day, sir, all night, to-merrow, and the day after. 'One raomene, Judd.' In fact it is Judd, Juid. Judil.' I had a great auxiety to see this wonderful man. He is a chunky gentleman | of about five feet five inches, has a broad, rod if lace, which shows well from the contrast of bia gray bair and flowing beard apreaching to whiteness. Us has a dark beid eve. he kad nose, rather short, and a · mouth beither expressive nor foreible. He is avide thy r character of much more tack than talent, and is tally impressed with the ones of the raysterious position he occupies in relation to the President elect. The anrewd ones slily says he managed to make Mr. bincoln believe that he nominated him, and so puts in for a large share of the spoils.

FREE INCENTIFY .-- On the island of Folse giver. Louisiana, is found a frog whose pecuharries, we believe, have hitherto escaped the attention of naturalists. It is called the "egg freg," from its great hankering after "hen fruit," and is a great nuisance to farmers in consequence. Being unable to break the shell of the egg, it is swallowed whole. after which the frog climbs a tree and then precipitates itself to the ground. The full brooks the shell, and the frog spits it out piece by circe.
